River Is Searched For Priest

Government Says No Body Found By Vistula Divers

WARSAW — Divers have failed to find the body of the Reverend Jerzy Popieluszko during a search of the Vistula River near the spot where the priest was abdueted on Oct. 19. Warsaw Radio reported

A communique released by the Interior Ministry said the search for the pro-Solidarity priest was continuing with "highly specialized equipment," the radio said. The In-terior Ministry has said the 37-year-old priest was kidnapped and possibly killed by three of the minstry's security officers.

Meanwhile, not police dispersed a demonstration Monday after-noon by about 1,000 Solidarity supporters in the southwestern city of Wroclaw, eyewitnesses said. Leaflets signed "Fighting Solidari-ty" had called for protests against the abduction of Father Popie-

'Europeanization' of Western Defense: An Idea Whose Time Came and Went

By John Vinocur

New York Times Service ROME — A year ago, a group of West European NATO allies, ratted by the public opinion prob-lems of deploying new U.S. nuclear missiles, began talking about a way to put a more visible European stamp on Western security policy.

The discussion fell under the general catch-word of "Europeanization," and it largely involved a plan to revivify the Western European Union, a little-used intergovernmental defense policy organiza-tion. The goal, beyond the officially stated desire to strengthen the Eu-ropean pillar of the North Atlantic Treaty Organization, was to take a little distance from the Americans, and what was regarded as their overly confrontational style of dealing with the Soviet Union. ## Independents Give Reagan Widening Margin, Poll Finds

By Hedrick Smith
New York Times Service

NEW YORK - Walter F. Mondale's failure to altract broad support from political independents is blocking his efforts to overtake President Ronald Reagan in the homestretch of the political campaign, according to the latest New York Times-CBS News Poll.

Among the electorate as a whole. the survey showed that on the foreign policy issues that Mr. Mondale pressed in the Oct. 21 debate. more people side with him than with Mr. Reagan.

But Mr. Reagan's overwhelming strength on the economy and increasing doubts about Mr. Mondale's leadership have had a more nowerful effect with most voters and have stalled Mr. Mondale's challenge, the poll indicated.

The survey was taken by tele-phone Oct. 23-25 among 1,068 reg-istered voters. Roughly half the probable voters said they were un-easy about the way Mr. Mondale would handle a foreign crisis or manage the economy. Solid major-ines expressed confidence in Mr. Reagan in both areas.

Aside from the expected opposi-tion among Republicans, the sur-vey showed the Democratic nominee running into particularly strong resistance among indepen-dents, among men and among the large block of voters in the 30-to-44-year-old bracket.

The New York Times-CBS News Poll indicated that the margin between Mr. Reagan and Mr. Mondale has widened since mid-Octo-

The poll found that among probable voters 53 percent favored Mr. Reagan and 35 percent favored Mr. Mondale. In a Times-CBS News poll taken Oct. 14-17, 50 percent were for Mr. Reagan and 37 percent for Mr. Mondale. In both polls the overall percentages were subject to sampling error of plus or minus three percentage points.

In the current survey, 12 percent

56 to 37 percent.

More than two-thirds of those still undecided are over 45 years old, identify themselves either as Democrats or independents, and as ideologically moderate or conservative. Slightly more than half are women. On the pivotal questions of leadership, their views are closer to those of Reagan supporters than Mondale supporters.

The difference between men and women in voter preference was larger than ever in the most recent survey. Mr. Reagan did much bet-ter among men than Mr. Mondale while his margin among women was modest. The survey found Mr. Reagan was preferred among men hy 59 to 29 percent and among women by just 47 to 41 percent. But the poli found that the economy was by far the most powerful issue driving the election. Fifty-five percent of those polled said it was the most important issue, and it works very strongly for Mr. Rea-

Moreover, Mr. Mondale has lost ground on what many political strategists consider the two most critical personal indicators: the public's perceptions of a candidate's leadership and its general reaction to a candidate.

After the first presidential debate on Oct. 7, a modest plurality rated Mr. Mondale a strong leader. But now, after the second debate, that plurality has turned negative, with 40 percent saying Mr. Mon-dale was strong and 45 percent say-ing he was not. By contrast, 70 percent say Mr. Reagan is a strong leader, a level be has maintained all

The Washington Post on Mon-day endorsed Mr. Mondale for president, saying he has been "maddeningly misrcad and mis-treated" by political trendmakers while Mr. Reagan "has been maddeningly indulged and over-praised." The Associated Press reported from Washington. In an editorial, The Post said Mr.

Reagan's administration would have been "an unmitteated disaster" without the moderating influence of Democrats. Mr. Mondale, in contrast, "has been serious, straightforward and genninely engaged in issues that the next presi-dent will have to deal with." (See editorial, Page 4.)

Really a Roomy World?

In response to a reporter's question during his Oct. 21 debate with Walter Mondale, President Reagan asserted that "the population explosion, if you look at the actual figures, has been vastly exaggerated, over-exaggerated." A look at the actual figures, bowever, should persuade most people that it is hard to exaggerate the population pressures that now threaten much of the developing world.

Despite progress in restraining birthrates in many countries, the number of people added to the globe increases by a record amount each year. Growth rates are still high — and even rising — in many countries. As a result, the World Bank recently warned, world population will more than double to at least 10 billion people by the middle of the next century unless far stronger family planning efforts are made.

Mr. Reagan cited as the source of his optimism "some pretty scientific and solid figures about how much space there still is in the world and how many more people we can have." But much of that space is not inhabitable by any stretch of the imagination. Other areas are needed for farming and the maintenance of natural resources; soil erosion has already become a critical problem in many developing countries. Nor would affluent nations welcome the enormous influx of immigrants that would be necessary to relieve overcrowding in other countries. If the next 5 billion people were in be evenly distributed across the countries of the world, accommodating them in so short a time would still be difficult. But most of the newcomers will be added to the developing world, where economic pressures are already acute. Some countries, especially in Africa and Latin America, will see their populations multiplied several times during the next 65 years. To avoid social and economic collapse these countries will have to create jobs, educate young people and provide health care on an unprecedented scale.

Economic growth will certainly help many developing countries, but the countries with the most economic success are also those that have begun, with the help of active family planning programs, to curb population growth. In Central America — which, as the president acknowledged, will put the most immigration pressure on the United States the burgeoning youth population has already contributed to disastrous levels of unemployment and continuing social unrest.

White House denial of the existence of population problems bas had one healthy effect. It bas reminded Congress and the public, which heavily supports U.S. population aid to coun-tries that need and want it, of the importance of such help. Thus Congress this year voted to increase overseas population aid programs by more than 20 percent. That is an important boost, but still far short of what is needed.

The Enemy Isn't OPEC

OPEC's chickens appear to be coming bome in roost. According to common belief, greed caused the cartel to raise the price of oil tenfold in a decade, triggering two world recessions. The same conventional wisdom now assumes that the recessions and widespread conservation have sent OPEC into retreat. allowing consumers to look forward to a long period of stable, lower oil prices.

Reality is not nearly that comforting. OPEC is more like a trade association than a cartel; its capacity in influence oil prices turns largely on the will of its most powerful member. Saudi Arabia. The two oil price shocks in the 1970s can be better attributed in disunity among consumers than unity among the producers. The members never did agree on bow in apportion production. Equally undisciplined consumers are likely to be spared more price jolts in the next few years, but not in the 1990s.

It is commonly believed that OPEC twice used the excuse of conflict in the Middle East (the 1973 war and the 1979 Iranian revolution) to raise prices and make the rises stick by then cutting production. The truth is messier.

On the eve of the first shock the price of oil was markedly lower than even the production cost of alternative fuels. At 1973 prices demand was rapidly outracing production. The first OPEC price increase was initially sus-tained by panic buying; no collective action to bold up the price was needed. Saudi Arabia alone, the exporter with the least need for revenue, simply held down production to match demand. OPEC was Saudi Arabia.

The second shock had even less to do with OPEC's supposed monopoly power. Conservation had not yet taken bold; consumption was higher than ever. So when the Iranian revolution triggered another panic and another doubling of prices, the collapse of Iranian and then of Iraqi exports, plus further cuts by Saudi Arabia, were enough to sustain the increase for several years.

Finally, though, the world's response to high oil prices put OPEC under pressure to act like a proper cartel. As oil consumption fell 15 percent from its 1979 peak and production from non-OPEC countries rose by 13 percent, OPEC was forced to absorb a 40-percent cut in sales. The pressure has proved too much. OPEC members now are openly cheating, producing more than their quotas and selling for considers bly less than the official OPEC price. Isn't that good news? Yes and no. It means lower oil bills, less inflation and more economic growth for a few years. It also means less conservation, less incentive to replace dwindling oil resources in North America and less pressure on consuming nations to build reserves. A growing proportion of the world's economically recoverable oil is in the Middle East. Unless America's policies change radi-cally, balf the oil it consumes in 1990 will come from foreign wells. And by the mid-1990s Saudi Arabia, or whoever rules its oil fields, will be back in the driver's seat. It is comforting to think that OPEC has been the enemy and that it has been vanquished by its greed and our sacrifice. There is, alas, no OPEC to vanquish. The enemy is the inevitable scarcity of cheap, liquid fuel - and the unwillingness of those who depend on it to do what is needed to regain control of their destiny. The really greedy enemy is us.

- THE NEW YORK TIMES.

Other Opinion

This One, That One, Neither

By almost all standards, we are better off than we were four years ago.

- The New York Daily News. Mr. Reagan's vision of an America embodying traditional values revived spirits bruised by years of discouragement over Vietnam, Watergate and the Iran hostage crisis. - The Omaha World-Herald

The Reagan administration ignores, rejects or simply stands ignorant of the institutionalized poverty and bopelessness eating at the bodies and tyrannizing the spirits of millions of Americans trapped in the backwaters beneath the national economic and social mainstream. The deeper essence of that administration has been racism with a smile.

- The Philadelphia Inquirer.

Once again we are respected by our allies. No longer are we pushed around by the Russians or humiliated by banana republics. - The Sunday Oklahoman (Oklahoma City).

Most of the policies we value are predicated on a sound economy. Mr. Reagan's economic ship is sailing forward; Mr. Mondale's would retrace a dismal and defeatist conrsc. - The Oregonian (Portland, Oregon).

It is our belief that the Reagan prosperity is the prosperity of living on borrowed money. Mr. Reagan, far from being the guardian of fiscal responsibility, has virtually destroyed whatever vestige of it there was.

- The Detroit Free Press.

The Sun will not endorse either candidate. We welcomed President Reagan's unapologetic readiness to have the United States play its role as a superpower, even while we deplored his indifference to civil rights and the disadvantaged. We challenged Walter Mondale's embrace of protectionism, even while we applauded his views on separation of church and state. We will do what we do best -which is to critique the candidates, day after day, on the basis of their performance and values. - The Baltimore Sun.

. . . and a British Conclusion

Mr. Reagan is not popular with the media — or not, at least, with the East Coast elite that makes up the bulk of the serious commentators on American politics. Such people are for the most part "liberals" in the American sense - that is, left of center. The popularity of a conservative populist president makes the pundits uneasy. [But] wby should people be-lieve that a policy which has produced lower inflation and more jobs with lower taxes is bad? What Mr. Reagan stands for is what most Americans want to believe in: their own virtue and their own strength. It is what their allies should want in believe in, too.

Just What Are the Nuclear Weapons For?

EW YORK — Nuclear weapons have figured more prominently than almost any other foreign policy issue in America's presidential cam-paign. Yet the nuclear debate still lacks focus, in part because weapons programs and policies have been considered only piecemeal.

There are important differences between the Republican and Democratic approaches to arms control. These differences should not be obscured by election year rhetoric.

The Reagan administration and the Republican platform advocate a continued weapons buildup; the Democratic candidates and their platform call for a freeze and for pursuing only those weapons systems that would contribute to a stable nuclear deterrent. Yet neither party nor pair of candidates has addressed the question of nuclear doctrine the precise military purpose that they believe nuclear weapons should serve.

There are four possible positions: Nuclear weapons can serve no mission, because their use would amount to suicide. If that is judged to be the case, the objective should be rapid reduc-tions on both sides leading to abolition of nuclear weapons by all nations. The problem is that this objective would be difficult if not impossible in achieve in the foresecable future.

Nuclear weapons can serve only the single mission of deterring nuclear attack against America and its allies. This would mean dropping plans for such potential first-strike weapons as the MX missile nd joining the Soviets in negotiating a freeze followed by reductions of 90 percent or more. Both powers could afford such reductions because a few ndred nuclear warheads would suffice for the single purpose of deterring nuclear attack. At the same time, America and its allies would have to make sure that they could defend themselves conventionally without threatening nuclear attack.

Nuclear weapons can serve the dual mission of deterring a nuclear attack and a large-scale non-nuclear attack against America and its allies. This has been the essence of NATO strategy since the alliance was formed in 1949. To continue it in the face of Soviet capability to respond in kind re-quires making a credible threat to commit suicide and take the Soviet Union along.

A Few Nuclear Weapons Suffice to Deter

THERE is no military use for nuclear weapons, and the steady development and accumulation of them increases the danger of ultimate disaster. The only sound role for nuclear weapons is as a deterrent to their use by others. A very few nuclear weapons, certain of delivery, constitute a powerful deterrent. No one knows how to use nuclear weapons in warfare. There are thousands of experts on technical matters and on military hardware, but on the critical issues of strategy, deterrence and the environment there are truly no experts. None! Each citizen realize that on the critical issues of what constitutes enough, what is an adequate deterrent, whether humanity can recover from a nuclear war and many other such questions, his or her studied judgments are as good as those of a president.

We need to re-evaluate our premises and rethink our priorities.

— Jerome Wiesner, former president of the Massachusetts Institute of Technology and science adviser to President Kennedy, writing in the Los Angeles Times.

Nuclear weapons can serve multiple missions. They can deter nuclear and nonnuclear attacks not only against close allies but wherever American leaders believe that U.S. interests are at stake, compelling the Russians to behave in certain ways and enabling the United States to prevail militarily in a nuclear war if it should occur. The Defense Department's five-year defense guidance envisions such multiple missions and therefore plans the expansion of existing nuclear stockpiles to include more powerful, more easily usable weapons.

Perhaps the most striking finding in a survey conducted throughout the United States last May by the Public Agenda Foundation, an organization for research and education, was that 74 percent of respondents opposed using nuclear weapons against conventional attack, thus opting for the single mission" -a fundamental revision of U.S. nuclear doctrine for some 35 years. Surely the presidential candidates owe the American electorate and the allies some discussion of this issue. Should the United States carry on with its present policy, and if so, wby? Or should it be moving away from a doctrine that relies on the threat of nuclear suicide to defend the security of allies, and if so, what would replace it?

The writer is senior adviser to the Center for Foreign Policy Development at Brown University in Providence, Rhode Island, a vice president of the investment bank Lehman Brothers and co-author of "Voter Options on Nuclear Arms Policy." He contributed this comment to The New York Times.

OXFORD, England — The case against the ouclear deterrent is the same as it has been for the last 20 years or more. Nobody has yet succeeded in constructing a situation in which it would be the more advantageous option — either as a "first strike" or in "retaliation" — in discharge a nuclear weapon against an enemy in possession of nuclear weapons; and it cannot make sense to acquire or maintain a weapon which in no circumstances it would be advantageous to use.

The classic British scenario is that of the summer and autumn of 1940, all other things being the same but Germany and Britain both possessing nuclear weap-ons. In those circumstances, even if the only alternative was invasion or occupation by Hitler, it the destruction wreaked upon it. The case is equally applicable against resort to nuclear warfare by an ally of Britain in 1940. If the United States had already been in the war and had been a nuclear power, the last thing the United Kingdom would have wanted was the use of American ouclear weapons in face of a po-tential or actual invasion.

The Washington Post Endorses Mondale

Democrats are more realistic and sensible these days thanks largely to the influence of Mr. Rea-gan. But without their comparable influence on his government's actions on questions like human rights and domestic fairness and a number of others, his policies, from Central America to your local disability payments office, would have been calamitous. And some of them actually are calamitous. His government has been grossly indifferent to the requirements of racial equity and the needs of the poor. It was so bad on environmental questions that, mercifully, its efforts backfired. To get its way on large economic social-program and civil-liberties coin, tossing amendments, regulatory restrictions, violations

S O we conclude that much of the Reagan administration's accomplishment has come very dear. Most important of all, its two principal claimed accomplishments, one foreign and the other economic, seem questionable to us, or at least greatly overstated. Take the foreign first.

We do admire the manner in which this administration managed the confrontation over the European missiles in the first part of its term.

That was its most important foreign policy success, though there have been others along with the failures. But in what sense is America "standing tall"? We believe the defense establishment did need bolstering, but what has occurred seems to us indiscriminate, helter-skelter and in some respects as phony as it is costly. Unrestricted money and discretion are not an answer to this country's defense needs. Within the administration the level of infighting over this and other national security issues as a reflection of policy disagreement and impasse has surpassed even that of the Brzezinski-Vance hate affair or other

In fact there has been an uncommon amount of turnover and turmoil in the national security apparatus of the Reagan administration and an uncommon amount of implacable enmity. No one ever said such terrible things about William

Clark when he was national security adviser, or

Caspar Weinberger or Richard Pede or Jeane Kirkpatrick or William Casey or Richard Allen or Alexander Haig, as were said about them by other high administration officials. We respect many of the people conducting foreign policy in this administration, most notably Secretary of State George Shultz, yet observe that the president has yet to permit or encourage the establishment of a steady, credible foreign and defense policy effort. His approach in arms control has been fitful and temperamental and unyielding of achievement. He has proved no more skillful in the Middle East than Jimmy Carter was in the Gulf region. And his better people are still not in the clear. This is the administration that appointed those 22 ambassadors who didn't know what was wrong with issuing a political statement in support of Jesse Helms's campaign.

THEN there is the economy. Mr. Reagan

L emphasizes, as well he might, the dramatic drop in inflation and the current prosperity.

These are wholly welcome developments. But it needs to be asked to what extent that drop in inflation was the result of a severe recession, which brought the highest unemployment since 1940. And how much may the current prosperity be owed to gigantic budget deficits? Things are going very well at the moment, but the economy is a bittle like the odd spring weather we are experiencing in this autumnal season. It is very agreeable, but the air is filled with hints of

The signs of profound economic instability are budget deficit is now compounding, as the Trea-of individual privacy and freedom.

If Germany in 1940 had pos-sessed, but neither Britain nor an ally possessed, nuclear weapons, that would still have left Britain no worse off than the situation just considered, namely, where, possessing nuclear weapons, she would be disadvantaged if she used them. Possession of nuclear weapons is no defense against nuclear blackmail. The conclusion is that nuclear

The proposition would bold good even if Germany had actuincur if they did not In concrete terms this is tantamount to claiming that Russia does not attack Western Europe for fear that, sooner than suffer defeat, the countries of Western Europe which possess nuclear weapons would use them in their own disadvantage, and that the countries which do not possess nuclear weapons would invoke the use of them in their disad-vantage by the United States. It is the position of the United States itself which clinches this argument in the negative. It must assume that its use of nuclear weapons in a European war would be attended by the probability of escalation, that is, of an inter-continental exchange. But no possible military success of sia in Europe could justify inviting the destruction this exchange would inflict on America.

thing that certainly will not happen. But the president, by all the evidence, genuinely does not understand the instability into which he has led the economy. He sticks with a few familiar and simple thoughts about incentives, hard work and the desirability of low taxes, even though there is nothing simple about this economy or the way the international capital flows are influencing

it. And the Reagan administration is poorly equipped to deal with any sort of a crisis in this area. The president has given too many of the key jobs in financial and economic policy to political cheerleaders - the economic and moral equivawith these things? Mr. Mondale, unlike the presi dent, has talked about the danger signs with candor and intelligence. Would he, as president, be able to carry out the cures that, as candidate, he has prescribed? Maybe not. To get a large tax increase through Congress would be an extra-ordinary feat in the best of circumstances. If the economy were to start sliding into another recession, it would be impossible. Mr. Mondale might then struggle to hold down unemployment

by resorting to the protectionist legislation that he has — wrongly and inexcusably — embraced. But Mr. Mondale's strength is that he understands the risks bere and that he is willing to talk openly about them and to take some politi-cal risks of his own in order to get people think-

N some measure, both presidential candidates

A have been victims of their campaigns. The president's too easy slide to glory this time around has accentuated all those elements of detached smugness and superficiality that most mar his administration. He is praised for restoring values, bot these values now have been reduced to slogans and propaganda. Mr. Mondale, too, has paid — for the slogging fight over the past couple of years against a broad array of competition to become his party's nominee. He bought some profoundly flawed positions—the freeze, which he is now, blessedly, applying the requisite qualifications to, and a variety of protectionist stands. But in contrast to his opponent be has been serious, straightforward and genu-inely engaged in the issues that the next president will have to deal with. He has, in the course of this phase of the campaign and, to some extent during the primary races, put some distance between himself and the impractical, muzzy-headed approach to foreign and security matters that so many in his party are suckers for. And where he erred in this direction earlier he seems in be moving back to stronger positions now.

Then there is Mondale the man. His record going back over the years demonstrates social and personal values that are the living embodiment of what the Reagan administration in its values pitch talks about. He is a decent man and a diligent, hardworking one who has been a good

Democratic leader before this year and, notably, in this campaign, in which he has evidenced strength and determination and a concern for others when he would have been justified in a descent into self-pity. And although we have noted the push-pull benefits on Democrats like

Mr. Mondale of the Republicans' better instincts and efforts, there are certain basic truths that he early and always understood - in particular those concerning the imperatives of racial justice

A few years back it was fashionable to put down Gerald Ford with the patronizing state-

- and here a whole host of other considerations were brought into play. Was decency, then, such a marginal, dismissable attribute in a president?

Why was it being talked about like a fringe? We don't know, but we hear something similar in the air today. Walter Mondale, it is said, is earnest, serious, a political fool for acknowledging the necessity of a tax bike, a guy who will bore your ear off talking about the issues, nothing like some of his flashier primary season competition or his entertainment-minded competitor in the White

A Sketch of Illustrator Hippolyte Romain

PARIS — Three years ago, few people had heard of illustrator Hippolyte Romain. Today, he is all over the map. Besides being a regular on the fashion scene for La Mode en Peinture, Vogue Sport, Passion, Liberation and l'Express, he covers music for Rock and Folk, and culture for La Croix (a Catholic daily,) for whom he recently illustrated the Saint Tropez video festival.

Lately, his reputation has spread outside of France. In Germany, he has been written up in Stern and in New York, the editor of Vanity Fair, Tina Brown, ordered two sets of illustrations from the versatile Romain, including one on the brothels of Singapore. He has also published a comic strip book, "Ces Cheries," which deals with the wackier side of fashion. Last week, five of his drawings were auctioned off at the Salle Drouot, making between 1,000 (about $108) and 1,500 francs apiece.

His most recent venture has been painted garments. He started painting the backs of natural-colored canvas raincoats (which were snapped up by German fashion editors) and went on to T-shirts, which he first sold at the Flea Market. Bloomingdale's recently placed a large order for the shirts.

Romain's success dido't occur overnight, "I come from a petitbourgeois Parisian family." he said They weren't too happy when I became a father at 16. They dropped me fast and I had to take any job I could get."

as a journalist who tells a story with sketches instead of words, believes be can get to a lot of places that would be barred to photographers.

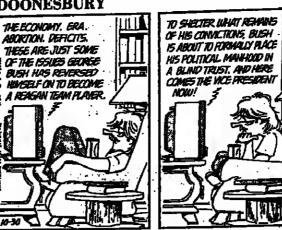

"In Singapore, I went into streets which are closed to photogra-phers," he said, "But nobody is suspicious of artists." This fact allowed him to sketch the lashion scene in East Berlin -- "drab, very drab" --- where, again, his presence went virtually unnoticed. "Drawing is innocent," Romain says.

Romain, 37, with his long curls framing a face lit by kind eyes, looks like a naive poet in a chil-dren's book. But his drawings are anything but innocent and many of them qualify as vitriolic. His vision of fashion editors, for instance, is terribly funny — but in a scary and sobering way. So are his sketches of fashion designers and fashion groupies.

"The editors are a worried lot of women who seem to go from one crisis to the next. Designers have often succeeded in fashion while dreaming of doing something else. Look at Mugler. It's clear he would have loved to be a movie actor. That's wby he's so influenced by Hollywood. With his sense of colors, Kenzo could have been a painter. Karl Lagerfeld is a businessman extraordinaire and Cardin is Monsieur Le Prince."

Romain says be loves the fashion world, even if be does not take it seriously. "It's an amusing world," he said, "but it's amazing bow people who work in fashion lack a sense of bumor. All of them would like to think that fashion is the eighth art, which may be a bit

Rolling Stone Gathers a Rare Portrait of Chagall

By Marilyn August

Associated Press France — They may go down in art history as one of the oddest ouples of all time: a millionaire rock star and one of the world's greatest living artists.

Bill Wyman of the Rolling stones has produced a book of his hotographs of Marc Chagall and of the reclusive Russian-born rench painter's works. Besides reproductions of nearly 50 drawings, poster colors and mosaics, "Chagall's World," published this mooth by Doubleday & Co., contains 20 portraits of the 97vear-old artist taken last year in his armhouse retreat.

The unlikely collaboration be-numbers once mirrored the discontent of a generation, and an artist famous for his green-faced fiddlers and sad-eyed rabbis, is the result of a long friendship.

Wyman and Chagall, neighbors in this tiny Provençal village for the past 10 years, met through Andre Verdet, Chagall's friend and a French art critic. They used to sip afternoon tea with Chagall's wife,

"For some reason, we just clicked," the 47-year-old Wyman said in an interview. One day he brought along his

"Chagall usually doesn't like having his picture taken, but I think he trusted me as a photographer," Wyman said, "He's easy to shoot because be has so many different expressions —I just stood in a corner of the room with a long lens and snapped the shutter."

Verdet interviewed Chagall as Wyman snapped pictures and the interview, one of the last given by the now ailing artist, is featured in the 128-page book.

Wyman said their relationship is based on mutual respect, even though he is not sure Chagall likes, or even knows the Stones' music. 10th birthday, I saved up — deliv-"It doesn't matter," be said, adding that he does not comment on Cha-film, and I've been shooting ever

At 3 P.M.: NYSE Trading Slow

United Press Internationa

NEW YORK - Prices on the New York Stock Exchange were drifting at a lower level late Monday afternoon as investors grew cau-tious over OPEC production cutbacks and the slowing economy.

The Dow Jones industrial average, which lost 6.07 Friday, was down 2.87 to 1,202.08 an hour before the close. The Dow lost 20.98 overall lost Declines led advances 878-553 among the ,930 issues traded. Five-hour turnover amounted to about 48.2 million shares, down from the 71.1 million in the same period Friday.

While prices in tables on these pages are from the 4 P.M. close in New York, for reasons of time this news account is based on information gathered earlier in the day.

"There are no institutional buyers in the market," said Dudley Eppel of Donaldson, Luf-market," said Dudley Eppel of Donaidson, Lufkin & Jenrette.

He coted that companies reporting third quarter earnings below expectations have been paying a "harsh penalty" in the stock market.

Even a drop in the prime, or base, interest rate that took effect at most big banks failed to dispel the gloom. The key lending rate dropped to 12 percent effective Monday at most big banks in the United States from 12½ percent.

One reason was warnings that interest rates could edge up before the end of the year or sometime next year. At mid-day Monday, the federal funds rate, which banks charge one another for overnight loans, traded at 10 percent, up from 9½ percent Friday, U.S. Trust Co. raised its broker loan rate to 10½ percent from 10¼ percent.

The Labor Department reported Monday that non-farm business productivity in was unchanged in the third quarter. It was the first time since the second quarter. It was the first time since the second quarter of 1982 that productivity did not increase.

Investors will be looking at some other important economic reports due this week to get a better focus on whether the economy is cooling off so fast that it might turn into a recession.

On Wednesday, the government will report on the index of leading economic indicators for September A government report on construc-tion expenditure is due Thursday and Friday the unemployment figures for October will be released.

All these should help focus the economic picture, which has been cloudy since the recent report that third-quarter gross national product increased only 2.7 percent.

By the time these figures are all out, some investors may prefer to wait until after the Nov. 6 election before making a commitment.

Northern Indiana Public Service was active after a block of 500,000 shares at 13%. Teco-Energy was down slightly in active trading.

R.J. Reynolds, which said it would buy back up to 10 million shares of its own stock at $73.50 per share, was lower after an opening block of $250,000 shares at $60%.

250,000 shares at 69%.

Champion International Corp. was lower in active trading. Champion said its 1984 oct income will be reduced by $120 to $150 million by writeoffs prior to its purchase of St. Regis Corp.

FUTURES AND OPTIONS

Farm Options Trading Seen Attracting Investors

TUESDAY, OCTOBER 30, 1984

By H.J. MAIDENBERG

New York Times Service

EW YORK — Following the Commodity Futures Trading Commission's approval of the "second wave" of options on futures on Monday, trading in options on soybeans, cotton, live cattle and several varieties of wheat futures will begin oo Tuesday for the first time on domestic

The farm options, as the trade calls them, are considered the most important development in the futures and options industry since the federal regulatory agency approved the "first wave" of options on futures in 1982. This experimental program produced the successful options on Treasury bonds and other financial debt instruments, foreign exchange and various stock in-

Options are the right, but not the obligation, to buy (call) or sell (put) the underlying futures or cash equivalent of the goods involved at a fixed price for a specified period of time. The option cost is known as the premium.

AR more important to option traders — who do not care whether prices go up or down as long as they are volatile—is that trading in the underlying farm futures has fallen dramatically in recent months as prices have meandered in generally narrow ranges.

generally narrow ranges.

In September, for example, trading in soybeans, once the most actively traded futures contract, plunged to 500,000 contracts on the Chicago Board of Trade, from 1.6 million a year before. The Chicago Mercantile Exchange's live cattle-futures market shrank to 181,000 contracts, from 344,000. And, on the New York Cottoo Exchange, cotton futures volume slumped to 39,500 contracts, from 122,000 in September 1983.

But the volume of world sugar options on New York's Coffee, Sugar, and Cocoa Exchange rose to 1,500 contracts last month, from 542 a year earlier.

from 542 a year earlier.

Given the sorry state of the farm futures markets in general, is this the time to introduce options on these contracts? Charles B. Clement, chairman of the options committee at the Chicago Board of Trade, says it is.

"The farm options will bring a new class of people, largely investors, to the futures market," Mr. Clement said. "Specifically, these investors will be more interested in the chances of their calls and puts turning a profit over a longer period than is the case with most futures traders."

As for the steady decline in the volume of the underlying futures, he said: "Based on our experience with the first wave of options, we expect this market to stimulate volume in the underlying futures because they will in effect afford hedgers, traders, arbitragers, and speculators the ability to offset risks in two David T. Johnston, senior vice president and a director of E.F. Huttoo & Co., was somewhat more cautious about the new options. The oew farm options and those that the exchanges are planning to introduce next year will be successful only if the premiums are reasonable and the farmers and commercial users of farm produce find it economic and coovenient to use them for hedging," he said, "and we won't know this for some time."

As it is, Mr. Johnston said, few farmers use futures to hedge their crops or lock in prices at harvest time. One major reason is that the farmer, who cares about the prices he gets, sells his crops to dealers who do not care about the prices he pays or gets, he

The dealers do use futures to hedge the crops moving through their elevators or warehouses. But the dealers do not use the futures to fix or lock in prices. For example, a grain elevator operator, working for a farmer co-op or for himself, offers the farmer a price based on the current market quote. Once bought,

France To Ease Bank Rule

Credit Controls To Be Simpler

By Axel Krause

nal Herald Tribune PARIS - Pierre Bérégovoy, France's finance minister, said Monday that the government will establish a new and simplified sys-tem of controlling credit of Frenchomiciled banks to facilitate their lending to consumers and business-

But French government officials emphasized that the move did not represent a shift in the government's restrictive monetary policy. It should lead to what an official described as "a long, overdue simplification and improvement in the way the sovernment controls cred. way the government controls cred-

The new system, effective Jan. 1, 1985, will replace the credit supervision system established in 1972, known as l'encadrement, which has been widely criticized by French and foreign bankers as being unwieldy to administer, confusing and unrelated to the level of real interest rates it involved establish. interest rates. It involved establishment of monthly lending quotas by the Bank of France on a bank-bybank basis and was tied to credits granted in the previous year.

The new system, aimed at encouraging banks to build up their capital reserves, will establish lending volume based on ohligatory reserves placed by banks with the Bank of France, the minister said.

Mr. Réfrigorous also said that the

Mr. Bérégovoy also said that the government would set a rate of between 4 and 6 percent for the expansion of the money supply in 1985, which compares with a target of 5.5 to 6.5 percent in 1984.

French and U.S. bankers said that they were puzzled by the minister's announcement and that many questions regarding details of the plan remained unanswered. "We understand that the system will be more flexible to administer, but we do not know the specifics or the conditions, which will deter-mined lending in the future," a senior French banker said.

Finance ministry and Bank of France officials are to meet Wednesday to work out details.

centerpiece of the most damaging political scandal in recent West German history, is a wealthy, sprawling empire with interests in almost every major aspect of industry.

With reported world revenue of nearly 10 billion Deutsche marks ($3.3 billion) and a workforce of 42,500, the giant holding company formally known as Friedrich Flick Industrieverwaltung KGaA is West Germany's largest family-held industrial enterprise.

But unlike Siemens AG, Daimler-Benz AG and other manufacturing stalwarts of the West German economy whose market power is visible daily through myriad products bearing their label, Flick has no business of its own other than the bus And it is this business — buying and selling stakes in industrial companies — that is the root of Flick's troubles and the accusations that it used bribes in the mid-1970's to elicit favorable govern-Financial records kept by Rudolf Diehl, Flick's chief accountant in the 1970s, indicate that the company may have paid some 25 million DM to the major political parties and to gain favor with leading politicians, according to widely published accounts in the West German press.

Two former economics ministers, Otto Lambsdorff and his predecessor, Hans Friderichs, and Eberhard von Brauchlisch, Fick's former deputy chairman, have been indicted on corruption charges growing out of the scandal. All three have denied the government's allegations.

Specifically, the company's tax-evasion imbroglio, dubbed the "Flick Affair," dates back to 1975 when it netted just under 1.9 billion DM from the sale of a 27 percent stake in Daimler-Benz to Deutsche Bank

State investigators say that in an effort to avoid having to pay large capital gains taxes on that profit, Flick's management, then Mr. von Brauchitsch, bribed high-placed Bonn officials to obtain an 800-million-DM tax-exemption.

Flick, allegedly with the aid of financial sweetners, was able to convince the responsible sweetners, was able to convince the responsible officials that by reinvesting the large capital gain from Daimler in a major overseas company, Flick should qualify for a tax waiver in accord with provisions on tax exemption under German law.

Currently, Flick has holdings in more than 60 companies worldwide. These include a 27 percent stake, purchased with revenue from the Daimler cale, in M.P. Gersen & Co., the I.I.S. chemical sale, in W.R. Grace & Co., the U.S. chemica concern, and a 10 percent stake in Daimler-Benz AG, maker of Mercedes. The Grace and Daimler investments alone yielded 99 million DM and 33 million DM in revenue, respectively, in 1983.

The government oow says Flick owes 450 mil-lion DM in back taxes on the 800-million-DM waiver granted as a result of the bribes. But a financial penalty of several hundred mil-lioo DM would oot likely throw off the expansion plans of a company which has reported sales of 10 billion DM and gross cash flow of 730 million DM. Last year, Flick was ranked as the 26th largest of all West German companies, with reported revenue for its consolidated group of 9.49 billion DM, up 10.2 percent from 1982. The group posted 1983 net profit of 295 million DM, the 13th-largest net recorded among all West German companies that year, compared with 95 million DM a year

A Flick spokesman, Manfred Kiesewetter, called "Indicrous" a world sales figure of 24 billion DM cited in various press articles, which takes into account a percentage of sales at Grace, Daimler, and a West German insurer, Gerling AG, where Flick holds minority stakes. He said Flick's revenue should be based strictly on the results of those companies majority-owned and consolidated by

But the real potential of today's Flick group and its management is not to be gauged so much by its ranking on charts as it is by the breadth of its industrial activities, including tanks, paper, chemicals, machinery and steel.

Hans Werner Kolb, a Flick partner who re-placed Mr. voo Brauchitsch two years ago, said recently that the company was preparing to sink several bundred million DM "in nearly every ma-jor area of industry" over the oext four to six years. While the day-to-day operations are run by Mr. Kolb and others out of company beadquarters in Duesseldorf, the chairman, Friedrich Karl Flick, charts his company's broader course in the quiet of his private home outside Munich.

Mr. Flick, 57, recently was listed as the second wealthiest person in Europe by Quick, a popular West German magazine that estimated his worth at 6 billion DM. He assumed full control at Flick 1982, upon the death of his father, the group's (Continued on Page 13, Col. 4)

Productivity In U.S. Was Flat In 3d Quarter

WASHINGTON - U.S. industrial productivity in the third quarter remained at second-quarter lev-els, the first stagnant period since the second quarter of 1982, the Labor Department said Monday.

The figures provided further evideace of a slowing in the U.S. economy. As reported, orders to U.S. factories piunged 4.3 percent in September, the sharpest decline in five months. Factories, manes and utilities operated at $1.9 percent of the property of t capacity in September, down from $2.6 percent in August, while the Commerce Department said that the gross national product of the United States increased at a 2.7percent annual rate in the third quarter, less than half the rate of the first half of the year.

Gross national product measures the total value of a nation's output of goods and services, including income from foreign investments. The Bureau of Labor Statistics said Monday worker productivity in the non-farm business sector from July 1 to Sept. 30 showed no

The Treasury secretary also predicted that "the economy will remain buoyant, but not overheated" and grow this quarter at a 4.2 percent or 4.3 percent annual rate. The "many alarmists who are suggreting that 1985 will be a negative one. or at best a year of low growth are wrong, Mr. Regan said.

Economists See Single-Digit Inflation in 1980s

By Peter T. Kilborn

New York Times Service
WASHINGTON — For nearly two decades, rapid economic recoveries generated higher inflation. But government figures on growth and inflation in recent days con-firm that the U.S. economy has and this time inflation barely budged. The ecocomy's performance through the recovery has persuaded many economists that the nation has seen the last of the double-digit inflation that it witnessed at the start of the 1980s and that the rate will remain at half that level or less for the rest of the decade. "We've passed the crisis stage," said A. Gary Shilling, a private eco-nomic consultant in New York, If there is a recession next year, he said, the rate could drop as low as 2 percent, well under the 4.2-percent rise over the 12 months through Sept. 30 that the Labor Department reported last Wednesday.

Martin S. Feldstein, who has returned to Harvard University after two years as chairman of President Ronald Reagan's Council of Economie Advisers, says it is possible that the inflation rate could rise to 5 percent or 6 percent next year but then drift back to 4 percent. "Four percent by the end of the decade — that would be quite an achieve-

Some ecocomists have been restraining their cheers, but for different reasons. To some, 4-percent inflation marks real progress, compared with the rates of more than 12 percent that the economy experienced in 1981 and 1982, But they add that the rate is still well above the level of the 1950s and that any inflation at all is a blot of instability on an otherwise sound econo-

To others, government policies designed to bring the rate down still further invite higher unem-ployment. Already, at 7.4 percent, the unemployment rate is unusually high after a period of strong economic growth. They also warn that, as the economy adjusts to lower inflation, many individuals, banks and other husinesses are being hurt, especially those that have borrowed heavily at high interest

It is changes in the domestic economy's usual forces of overheating, however, that account for much of the decline in inflation and for economists' confidence that about half the inflation of the start of the 1980s has been eliminated.

Chicago Pacific Bid 'Negotiable'

NEW YORK — Chicago Pa-cific Corp. said Monday that its proposed after for Textron Inc. is "negotiable in all respects." but the plan will be dropped if it is opposed by Textron's board. Early last week, Chicago Pacific made a $1.6-billion take-over bid for Textron at $43 a share. The company, successor in the bankrupt Chicago Rock Island & Pacific Railroad Co. reiterated that it would like to acquire Textron on a friendly basis and the two companies Monday signed a confidential-ity agreement. Under the agreement, Chicago Pacific said that, in exchange for full discussion of its offer, it agreed not to acquire any more Textron shares in the open market or through a tender offer for two years without the approval of the Textron board. Textron share prices fell $2 a share on the New York Stock Exchange Friday to close at $37.

The CLARKSON COMPANY LIMITED in its capacity as Court-appointed Liquidator of 1.0.5 Ltd. (105) and as Agent for the Public Trustee of Ontario as Administrator of the assets which were formerly the assets of Transglobal Financial Services Limited (Transglobal) hereby advises that a conditional compromise has been reached with the laquidators of the Mutual Funds founded by IOS, who made claims against IOS and Transglobal as creations. The magnitude of claims of the Mutual Funds was such that, if admitted, or otherwise established, they would have exceeded the assets available in the hands of the IOS and Transglobal estates by many times.

The proposed compromise is subject to several conditions, the most important of which is sunction by each of the Courts responsible for the Estates affected. However, if the compromise is approved and otherwise becomes unconditional, if now appears that some value will be attributable to shares in each of IOS and Transglobal.

It is anticipated that in early 1985 a detailed report concerning the p n comprome and the status of the liquidations will be sent to shareholders who have compromise and the status of the liquidations will be sent to shareholders who have advised The Clarkson Company Limited that they are shareholders and have provided their addresses. At that time shareholders will be asked to provide more specific information about their shareholdings in these two companies.

All persons who claim to be entitled as shareholders of IOS or of Transglobal are equested to advise Clarksons at the address below of their full name, address and

Shareholders are particularly asked not to send they share certificates or

THE BEST AMERICAN SHORT STORIES 1984

Selected from U.S. and Canadian magazines by John Updike with Shannon Ravenel. 295 pp.

$14.95 hardback, $8.95 paperback. Houghton Mifflin, I Beacon Street, Boston, Mass. 02108.

Reviewed by Jonathan Yardley

I N his thoughtful introduction to this collec-tion of the 20 stories he chose as last year's best by American and Canadian writers, John Updike addresses himself to the question, much discussed in literary circles, of the shrinking popular market for short fiction. He notes that by comparison with a half-century ago, a writer cannot expect to support himself by selling stories to mass-circulation maga-zines as William Faulkner and F. Scott Fitzgerald (and many others) did, and he makes this assute observatioo:

"Now, for the bright young graduates that pour out of the lowa Writers" Workshop and its sister institutions, publishing short stories is a kind of accreditation, a certificate of worthiness to teach the so-called art of fiction. The popular market for fiction has shriveled while the academic importance of 'creative writing' has swelled; academic quarterlies, operating under one form of subsidy or another, absorb some of the excess. The suspicion persists that short fiction, like poetry since Rudyard Kipling and Robert Seymour Bridges, has gone from being a popular to a fine art, an art preserved in a kind of floating museum made up of greaty little superfluents masseum.

Thus it is that of these 20 stories, 14 originally appeared in quarterlies: The Georgia Review (two), The Crescent Review, MSS, Antaeus (two), Ascent, CntBank, Black Warrior Review, The Greensboro Review (two), The Paris Review, Stories and The Yale Review. Five of the others appeared in The New York-er, and one in Esquire. The tone of the stories reflects the audience to which they are ad-dressed; they tend to be elliptical, terse, "literary," as is the vogue in the writing schools these

The best of them, though, are very good indeed, and the best come not from The New Yorker — with the exception of "Glimpse Into Another Country," by the estimable Wright Morris — but from the quarteries. This proba-bly has less to do with a swell of talent in the writing schools than with Updike's careful process of selection; in reading through the stories he sought out "those that somehow, in addition to beginning energetically and ending intelligi-bly, gave me a sense of deep entry, of entry into life somewhat below the surface of dialogue and description," a criterioo that automatically excluded stories in the diffident, minimalist style favored by devotees of Ann Beattie and Interestingly, though probably not signifi-cantly, many of the stories are about death, but for the most part not lugubriously so. Dianne-Benedict's "Unknown Feathers," Mary Ward

Brown's "The Cure." Mavis Gallant's "Lena." Mary Hood's "Inexorable Progress," Susan Minot's "Thorofare." Jonathan Penner's "Things to Be Thrown Away"—all deal in one way or another with whal Hood calls "the inexorable progress toward the dark, the sealing the losing sight of, the closing. But there's not much sobbing or sighing here: as the drunken old doctor says to the ailing woman in Brown's story, "What's you've got, Auntie, is the same thing I've got — old age. There ain't but one cure for it." Confronting their characters with that cure, these writers lend, like Brown's doctor, to let them "get . . . back up for a while."

Not surprisingly, giveo the relative youth of many of the authors, children figure importantly in several of the stories. One of the best of these is Jeanne Schinto's "Caddies' Day," wherein a rather obnoxious little girl gets an emphasic if ultimataly applied to a support of the stories. emphatic if ultimately gentle comeuppance at the hands of a few bored and horny men. James Salter's "Foreign Shores" seems to revolve around a five-year-old boy and his au pair caretaker, but as Updike correctly notes, the real center of business is his divorced

In Rick DeMarinis's "Gent," another mother is the center of attention, and what her 12er is the center of attention, and what her 12year-old son learns about her gives him no comfort; this funny, troubling, haunting story is Updike's real discovery, the story that for me makes the whole endeavor worthwhile. But two others get bonorable mention: "Morrison's Reaction," by Stephen Kirk, a hilarious account of a long day to the dentist's chair, and "The Cold Room," by Lowry Pei, in which 3 confused young man realizes that he has fastened his romantic interests on the wroog tened his romantic interests on the wroog woman and hastens, if guiltily, to attach them where they belong.

There's nothing cosmic to say about this group of stories, and Updike wisely refrains from trying. The best of them are intelligent, imaginative and bandsomely written. They deserve to be read by B wider audience than the quarterlies reach, and Updike deserves our gratitude for finding them.

Kennedy Center Puts Losses At $1.9 Million for Fiscal '84

Washington Part Service
WASHINGTON — The Kennedy Center

is announced a net loss of nearly $1.9 million for fiscal year 1984, blaming escalating productioo costs...

The operating deficit is the first to be reported by the Center since 1972, wheo start-up costs resulted in a deficit of approximately $276,000, according to Roger L. Stevens, the Center's chairman.

Stevens described the Center's financial situation as "precarious" and said it was aggravated last year by rising tieket prices, mixed-to-negative reviews, a shortage of sure-fire road attractions and the growing reluctance of audiences to risk their mooey on anything but pretested successes.

Broncos Beat Raiders, 22-19, With Field Goal in Overtime

LOS ANGELES — Rich Karlis kicked a 35-yard field goal as time expired in overtime Sunday to give the Denver Brancos a 22-19 National Football League victory over the Los Angeles Raiders. Safety Roger Jackson set up the winning score by intercepting a pass from Raider quarterback Marc Wilson and returned it 23 yards to the Raiders' 22-yard line with 38 seconds remaining. Sammy Winder then ran for four yards before the Broncos' let the clock run down to five seconds and called time out.

Karlis, who kicks bare footed and was wide left on a 42-yard field goal attempt with 3:30 remaining in the overtime, then came through with his game-winner.

Los Angeles had a chance to win the game in the opening minute of the overtime. A 41-yard pass from Wilson to Malcolm Barnwell put the ball at the Denver 11-yard line. But on the next play running back Frank Hawkins fumbled and defensive back Steve Foley recovered for Denver at the Broncos' 7.

Giants 37, Redskins 13 In East Rutherford, New Jersey,

Joe Morris scored on three short runs and Phil Simms passed for two touchdowns as New York beat Washington, 37-13. The victory was the Giants' first over the Redskins in seven NFL games dating

Morris scored on 2- and 1-yard sweeps in the first and second quar-ters, respectively, and on a 5-yard sprint off right guard in the third

Simms completed 18 of 29 passes for 339 yards, firing a 22-yard touchdown pass to Earnest Gray in the first quarter and an 8-yard TD toss to Bobby Johnson on the open-ing play of the fourth quarter that gave New York a 37-6 lead.

49ers 33, Rams 0

In Anaheim, California, Joe Mootana threw for 365 yards and three touchdowns as San Francisco blanked Los Angeles, 33-0. Mon-tana, the conference's top-rated passer this season, completed 21 of his 31 attempts, including a stretch beginning in the second quarter when he completed 13 straight, accounting for 263 yards.

Andersen, who earlier booted field goals of 26 and 21 yards, sent the Browns to their fifth passed over the crossbar.

Minnesota Viking quarterback Archie Manning found out the hard way why the Chicago Bear defense is ranked No. 1 in the National Football League. Manning was sacked 11 times for losses totaling 101 yards as the Vikings were defeated, 16-7. "It's a game I'd like to forget and fortunately I have forgotten most of it," said Manning, who was forced out of the game in the fourth quarter. "I hadn't played for a while. It was my pride that was hurt."

Barrasso Sent to Minors In Shake-Up of Sabres

BUFFALO, New York - The Buffalo Sabre's coach and general manager. Scotty Bowman, said he sent goaltender Tom Barrasso to the minor leagues to give the vouog star some more work and perhaps to revive his listless National Hockey League team.

The move paid off Sunday as Buffalo beat the Calgary Flames, 6-2, behind the goaltending of Bon Sauve, and Barrasso made 27 saves for the Rochester Americans of the American Hockey League to lead the team to a 4-1 victory over the Sherbrooke Canadiens.

"Nothing surprises me," Sauve said of the Barrasso move, "I've seen many moves and I've seen a lot of weird things happen in my 10-year career."

In other games, Ron Francis scored twice in leading the Hart-ford Whalers over the Chicago Black Hawks, 4-1; Ken Linseman with an assist from newly acquired Charlie Simmer, netted the winner as the Bostoo Bruins beat the New York Rangers, 6-4; and Alan Haworth's third goal of the game broke a tie and sparked the Washington couver, extending the Canucks' los ing streak to seven games.

On Saturday, Bowman sent Barrasso, last year's Venna Trophy winner and NHL rookie of the year, to Rochester, saying he was trying to shake things up after the Sabres had lost two straight to bring their road record to 0-4. Buffalo, however, has won all five "You've got to believe that everything is done for the benefit of the backey club," said Ric Seding, who scored one of the Sabres' three second-period goals, "He'll [Bar-rasso] be back. But it keeps us on Sauve, who rotated on a game-to-game basis with Barrasso last year, had not seen much ice time this year as Barrasso started six of the first eight games.

Bowman said the decision to send Barrasso down stemmed from the goaltender's slow start and the opportunity to get more work in goal for Rochester.

"They [Rochester] play five games in the next eight nights." Bowman said. Meanwhile, Sauve, after allowing two goals on Calgary's first four shots in the first period, did not allow another goal.

"In the first period, I wasn't sure of myself," Sauve said. "After that, Capitals to a 5-2 victory over Van- 1 felt great."

I was one of few who didn't. At one time I was involved with nucle-

In 1962, after the Cuban missile crisis. I was elected by the PTA as civil defense co-ordina-those days for an elected official of the PTA when it came to a nuclear attack other than to have pupils crawt under their desks until the all-clear sounded. So I had to start from scratch.

I still have the memorandum I composed for dissemination to all

"In the event of a pending nuclear attack on the Horace Mann Public School, every teacher will blow his or her whistle three times. "All non-essential classes will be canceled as well as field trips to the White House and the Smithsonian Insuitution. "Students will line up in the halls in an orderly fashion. Anyone who engages in horseplay will be immediately sent to the principal's office for punishment.

Assuming there will be 20 minutes before a nuclear weapon reaches Washington, those pupils who wish to go to the bathroom may do so. Teachers will use their

"Since drinking water may be in short supply, students should be urged to use the fountains in the halls before the attack. I am now in touch with the civil defense authorities to see if Horace Mano is eligible for food rations that can be stored in the janitor's closet and be made available in case the children get huogry after hostilities cease.

"It will be the principal's job to listen to the radio and keep in touch with what is happening outside the school. When the missile is five minutes from target all pupils will be told to sit on the floor against a wall and place their heads between their legs. Once they are assured that their students have done this, the teachers may then sit on the floor as well and take the same position. In the event that Horace Mann is totally destroyed, the principal, at his own discretion, may order all the students to be bused to the closest school in the district that has been spared.

The most important thing for teachers is to avoid panic and anxiety, which will only upset many der a nuclear attack before.

"One way of doing this is to pretend it's just a game like 'Show and Tell.' Another might be to sing 'Row, Row, Row Your Boat.'

"After the attack is over, and the fallout ashes have settled, classes will be dismissed and students will be told to go directly home. It's quite possible that it will take several weeks to get the school repaired, in which case students will have to make up their classes during the summer vacation.

"All teachers will be expected to study this memorandum, as they will be questioned on it at the next PTA meeting.

Chatting With Acerbic Joseph Alsop

By William E. Farrell New York Times Service

WASHINGTON — Come spend about two hours in the living room of Joseph Alsop, the retired columnist whose quick pen and even quicker tongue were once dreaded by many of the powerful and whose wide-ranging scholarly interests enunciated io aristocratic nasalities, at countless Washington dioner parties, caused the envious to label him a pedant and a dilettante. The conversation goes something like this: From Homo erectus to the Reagan administration.

To an expose of the artistic cribbiog that went into the construction of the Arch of Constantine in Rome.

To some scathing commentary on the Carter administration. To an assessment of Franklin D. Roosevelt by a distant relative. To his views on artists ranging from an ancient Egyptian, Imho-tep, to the modernists Mark

Washington in the 1930s. To anecdotes about great Renaissance art collectors such as the Medicis. To acerbic views on growing Rothko and Willem de Kooning.

To what it was like to live in

There is absolutely no reason, Alsop will tell you, for him in be interviewed because he is a "hasbeen." Actually, Alsop, a Washington fixture who just turned 74. is embarking on a new venture, his memoirs

When he retired as a political columnist nine years ago, he de-voted himself to art history and published a scholarly work called The Rare Art Traditions - A History of Art Collecting and Its Linked Phenomena." It is heavily footnoted esoteric stuff, far removed from the flinty style of the Alsop political essays that ap-peared in newspapers around the

Now he has begun compiling materials for his memoirs although the prospect of writing about himself has given him "a first-rate case of writer's block which I've never had before."

After the memoirs, he plans to return to writing about art because he is fascinated by the fact that about 200,000 years ago Homo erectus had fashioned artistic hand axes beyond mere utilitarianism. The puzzle be wants to solve is what stimulated an aesthetic sense in these precursors of Homo sapiens. "You have in the hand axes a curious transi-tion of art suddenly for use plus beauty," be said.

Alsop seems to have mellowed. although there is nothing of the tame tabby about him. The knife is there, but more often than not it is kept in the scabbard. He sits in his living room in Georgetown, chain-smoking organettes inserted in a white filter, nursing a gener-ous Scotch in a goblet and survey ing the thousands of wellthumbed books that line the walls from floor to high ceiling.

A question about contemporary politics is quickly fended off: "I don't want to talk about politics. I've done with it. I'm a has-

After a pause he launches into a monologue on American poli-tics steeped in history and laced with observations from his experience. Of his distant relative, Franklin D. Roosevelt, he says reverentially: "The greatest president of this century - Franklin Roosevelt set the standard for all of us." A slight edge creeps in when he speaks of "my virtuous monument to FDR in this city of bronze men on horseback. But he contends it may be just as well since these are not times that would produce a suitable artistic salute to the man whose long tenure in the White House he observed closely and often wrote about. Of a 1982 work called "FDR: A Centenary Remem-brance" he says it "wrote itself. family gossip."

Jimmy Carter, Alsop says with the dagger of pique unsheathed, was "certainly the worst president this country's ever had with the possible exception of Buchan-

In the Vietnam War, Alsop was hawk and be still thinks of it as war "we could have won and should have won" if President Lyndon B. Johnson had made strong, patriotic appeals instead of trying "to make a war without The New York Times noticing." "Our greatest success in my lifetime—and no other country's done it that I know of —has been cousin Eleanor," Mrs. Roosevelt, his first cousin once removed. He is irritated that there is no

Alsop has had heart surgery in the last two years. "It's been my observation that you go on living like a young man until suddenly you're an old man," he said. "It's a bore: There's absolutely nothing to recommend old age. It's a great deal easier if you can have a pleasant house and a good cook, which is no doubt the result of unfairness and inequality. But so he it. So long as it lasts."

We started with art," he said, stirring slightly in the comfortable chair in which he had sat and let his mind roam.

People three or four genera-tions ago, he said, lived with objects that reflected their time. He looked at the antiques in his liv-ing room and said: Today, ei-ther they have a lot of withered stumps of time - as fortunately ! do, thank God - or everything's made of plastic. I keep asking myself: what's happened?"

Then, with a laugh, he lights another cigarette and says: "You never like what you are not used to when you're old."
